The jury that bad under consideration the case of Newton Whitehead, indicted for aborion, entered l'art III. of the General Sessions resterday, after having been locked up nearly centy-four hours, and announced that they had been unable to agree. Judge Allison disenerged them. Assistant District Attorney Davis said he would move for a retrial on Tuesday next, and Judge Allison requested that he bring the trial before another Judge.

Mainy, the third juror, and Robert C. Whitten, the eleventh. Whitten and the foreman, Alexander Redlick, had a disagreement at the trial, fter a discussion in German as to the competency of the interpreter. Whitten objected to the other jurors speaking among themselves in German.

It may be that the proposal to discipline members of the last McLaughlin Jury who voted to acquit had something to do with the spirit displayed by some of the members of the majority this case. Foreman Redlick was profuse in his expression of suspicton.

We stood 10 to 2 for conviction from the first ballot," he said. " It is a most outrageous case. I said in the jury room, and I do not hesitate to say so again, that I believe money was used in the case. I intend to see the District Attorney, and say that such jurors should be locked up if justice is to be had. It is most disgraceful, and believe somebody has been tampered with.

"They were like a lot of grese," said Malay.

"They pounded at me all night and paid no attention to Whitten. Redlick was asleep half the time, and did not know what occurred in the jury room. There was bad blood between Whitten and Redlick all along. The Germans on the jury banded together against us."

Malay and Whitten are of Scotch-frish extraction, and the ill feeling seemed to have originated from this. Malay said that he and Whitten had voted on their convictions, and that any traction, and the interest of that he and which insted from this. Assistant District Attorney Davis asked Judge Allison to dismiss the indictments for extortion against Agnes Berthold, the complaining witness, and Richard Meisner, the barber, who was also a witness. Mr. Davis said he was of the opinion that the evidence in the trial clearly proved that Agnes Berthold and Meisner had been enticed into the scheme by the Parkhurst agents through Whitehead.

Justice McCarthy of the City Court was pass. ing through the corridor of the upper floor of the City Hall at recess vesterday and saw two men outside of the room where Justice Newburger was holding court pummelling each other with vim and evident satisfaction. The little Judge gave his high hat to a friend and jumped in between the contestants, crying: Break away!"

They did not seem to recognize him or were to intent on business to heed him, for they fought on as if he were not between them. As the Judge is very short the face of each scrapper was still an exposed target for the other. But the Judge is vigorous and strong of arm, and when he grabbed each with one hand ther

SHE SLAPPED HIS FACE.

A Young Cuban Woman Has an Encounter With Rer Landjord, and Escapes Beiore Re Can Find a Policeman to Help Him, Mrs. Arabella De Mortimer Giles, a young and pretty Cuban woman, went before Police Justice Walsh yesterday morning in the Adams street court in Brooklyn to answer a charge of assault. George H. Saward of 416 Third street, who was formerly in the real estate business at 59 Liberty street with Mrs. Glies's husband, was the complainant.

Mr. Saward has the agency for a big brownstone house at 20 West Twenty-fourth street, and several months ago he furnished it and put Mr. and Mrs. Giles in charge for the purpose, he says, of selling it. He had a mortgage on the furniture, and after a quarrel with Mr. Giles he made up his mind to foreclose it. On last Friday Mrs. Giles went to Brooklyn to see Mr. Saward. and during her call at his house, she says, the assault was made. Mr. Saward related that Mrs. titles slauned him on the face, struck him back of the ear with a blunt instrument, and hurrled from the house before he could call a policeman. Daniel Maloney, who is attached to Justice Waish's court, went on Wednesday afternoon to the West Twenty-fourth street house with a to the West Twenty-fourth street house with a warrant for Mrs. Giles. He brought back his pretty prisoner, but he said he got her only after a two bour siege and a lively scrimmage. Arrived at the Twenty-fourth street house, Maioney found the doors and whichows fastened and the blinds down, and thinking the house unoccupied went to Mr. Saward's office in Liberty street and reported his observations. Mr. Saward sent him back to the house with instructions to hire a locksmith and torce an entrance. When the front door had been opened by the locksmith, it was found that the vestibule door was not only locked and boiled, but trance. When the front door had been opened by the locksmith, it was found that the vestibule door was not only locked and boited, but also barricaded from the inside. Maloney and the locksmith then turned their attention to a parlor window. Maloney mounted the sill, and with the aid of the locksmith opened a window. Just as Maloney was about to jump into the parlor somebody in the room closed the shutters in a hurry, and he steeped off the sill and into the areaway. He mounted the sill again, kicked in the shutters, and fell headlong into the parlor. There he found Mr. Giles, indignant and pugnacious. There was a scrimmase through the big room, and a crowd which Maloney estimates at 2,000 collected in front of the house to learn the cause of the runnus. Two Broadway policemen came, too, and Maloney explained his business to them. In the confusion Mirs, Giles slipped out of the house, but she did not get further than the stoop. She was arrested there by Maloney and was taken to Brooklyn. Bail was given promptly for her appearance.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Giles explained to Justice Walsh that Mr. Saward had called her husband a thief, a liar, and a scoundrel, and she was so enraged that she might have slapped him in the face. Justice Walsh adjourned the hearing for a week.

PREUMONIA'S A DISEASE, NOW.

It Wasn't in the Sixth District Court, but It is in the Common Pleus, Annie Kiernan died of pneumonia on Jan-10 last, within a year after her life had been Insured for $130 in the Metropolitan Life. The policy provided that if death occurred within the first year of insurance the company would pay only half of the face of the policy, and if death occurred from "pulmonary disease" within the first year only a quarter. The company offered Mary Kiernan, the beneficiary, $32.50, but she sued for $65, alleging that pneumonials not a "pulmonary disease." On the trial in the Sixth District Court, Dr. Alphonso M. Wallace of 257 East Forty-eighth treet, who is visiting physician at Bellevue, Charity, and Metropolitan hospitals, testified that pneumonia is not a disease, but an affection which a perfect pair of lungs may contract suddenly. He said it could not be called a disease as the affection resulting from a stab wound in the kidney could not. He described pneumonia ss an accidental condition.

Dr. William S. Manners and Dr. Frank N.

Patterson, both of whom are in the employ of the defendant, testified that pneumonia is a pulmonary disease. Dr. Manners testified that any condition of the system which is not physio-logical is pathological, and so diseased. He was subjected to the following examination by Jus-tice Daniel F. Martin, before whom the case was tried:

was tried:
"A great many medical men say that no human being is absolutely in perfect health at any time, any moment of his life. Is that true?"
"The chances are that, strictly speaking, that would be true."
"I am talking about the whole physical condition of the lady. There are men, the say no one tion of the bedy. There are men tho say no one is ever in perfect condition. Do you agree with them?"
"Yes, sir: I would agree with them on that point."
"If for a moment there should happen to be a pathological condition of the lungs, wouldn't that be a diseased condition, although it passed away immediately?"
"Yes, str."

away immediately?"
"Yes, sir."
"And that would void this policy if it were signed at this time?"
"Yes, sir."
The witness also said that he did not believe it possible that the germs of pneumonia were in the system of the policy holder when the policy was signed, eight months before she died. Justice Martin found for the plaintiff for $65.
The General Term of the Common Pleas upset this juagment yesterday. Judge Pryor says:
"It hardly consists with judical gravity to argue against a proposition of which the absurdity is self-evident; which involves at once an affront to common sense, a misconception of an affront to common sense, a misconception the plain sense of a plain word, and a contem for the uniform and universal significance scientific nomenclature. That pneumonia is disease is a notorious fact, and so a fact of jucoom at the hotel at about 5 o'clock. He picked dicial cognizance."

The judgment of $65 allowed by Justice Martin is reduced to $32,50.

> TAMSEN'S BARBERED PRISONERS. Hoboken Before the Robbery There.

Joseph Killoran, Charles Allen, and Harry Russell, the three men accused of robbing Post Offices whose looks were changed by Tamsen's German barber at the Ludlow street jail so that their identification was almost impossible, had a hearing yesterday before United States Commissioner Shields. The big United States Circuit Court room, which was used, was crowded with people from Hoboken, Patchogue, Riverhead, Springfield, Itl., and other towns who thought they might be able to identify the three

The Springfield folks told the crowd how six men swooped down on that town, spending money right and left. "I spotted them for crooks," said one of them, "and the citizens were going to turn out and lynch me. The citizens all said these were legislative lobbyists and to leave them alone. We left them alone, and to leave them alone. We left them alone, and they cut a figure with money to burn. They stayed four days; then called at the Post Office and took $3,000 and the wedding presents of the Postmaster's daughter.

Killoran, Allen, and Russell were brought down from the jail about 11 o'clock, Allen looked as it he had been punched in the eye. The detectives called his left eye a "beaut." Luited states Marshal McCarthy said it was a fake. After a while Allen rubbed his face and the black disappeared. The prisoners were dressed a little differently than they were the last time they appeared. Killoran wore a John Chinaman black hat in place of the straw hat he had worn. Allen had a dirty white Alpine hat, and Russell a black soft hat. All wore russet leather shoes that looked out of place with the blue check jumpers and bandanna handkerchiefs that the men had on.

The examination was in the matter of the robbery of the Hoboken Post Office, and there were four or five witnesses. They had seen the men loitering in Hoboken a week or two before the robbery, they said. The last time they were seen there by more than one of the witnesses was four days before the robbery. A small boy testified that he had seen them in the Post Office the day of the robbery.

The testimony was listened to with great interest by Killoran, who occasionally shook his head. The hearing was adjourned until this morning at 11 o'clock. they cut a figure with moncy to burn. They
